“ *My fondest memories of Marjorie always included food, back in the early seventies Sunday dinner were better than any five-star restaurant. Marjorie could cook just about anything and always made it look so easy! She taught me to make her 7-minute icing and to always remove the white part attached to the egg yolk. To this day I cannot crack an egg without removing the little white part! A few years back while visiting with my mother Marjorie shared that her bread-starter was originally from my step-father Paul, since he had been gone some thirty-five plus years it was really heartwarming to know something he started was still being used. Marjorie will be missed I know especially by her children Tommy and Beverly but also Samantha who was more like one of her own children than a grand-child.
God's Blessings to the family!
