“ Theresa and I met in high school, both expecting our daughters Angel and Mindy. We used to take bets on who had the cutest baby bump. I’m pretty sure Theresa won the bet, especially when she wore her outfit with black slacks a white top that had a black ribbon tied around her above her tummy. She amazed me the way she ate her McDonalds burger. She would remove the meat then fill her bun with fries... she usually washed it down with a shake, let’s not forget the fries on the side! LOL

Theresa and I used to go to the beach with our daughters. We danced, laughed, and cried together, most people we met thought we were sisters, me being the eldest, that’s how we saw each other, sisters. My heart broke when I heard the news about her passing. She’s home in heaven with her baby girl Heather. Theresa loved her family more than words can express. Her love Rory she adored and cherished. I pray for her family I pray asking God to help you all find peace, the kind I know Theresa would want her family to have.

“ Oh the memories! Most of them I cannot post on a public forum LOL! BUT there were some good ones! @Angel you were my partner in crime with most of them once Teresa would run to the store or turn in for the evening. -So I know YOU know 😊. Growing up I was ALWAYS called Teresa because we were the only two girl cousins out of a huge clan of boys. If my memory serves me right, she was the oldest of the cousins. and the only girl until I came along 15 years later being the last and always joking with her that I was the youngest, as the time passed. Thank you, Teresa, for giving me one of the most precious people in my life. Angel has been my sister since diaper hood, my best friend in grade school, she has inspired me to do great things in adulthood and most importantly believe in myself. Angel has been a true blessing more than she will ever imagine and I know how proud you were of her. I would always overhear the conversations you had about her to our Aunt Jan and Dolores and Uncle Gene. I will always think of you when someone says "Ya know? or Ya know what I mean?" As this was your favorite lines to repeat anytime, we had talked. Oh I can not forget the record time we made it driving from CA to AR to deliver Jacksons his birth certificate to him just in time for his first job. 25 or 26 hours was it? All I remember was sleeping for like 7 days straight right after. 😊 I will miss you my cousin! I know Heather was at those gates arms open wide waiting for her Mom. Love you.
