“ Since there was a 16-year age difference between my oldest sister Virginia and me, my memories of her started a little later in her life. She, my other older sister Peggy, Polly Jordan, and Betty Johnson (cousins) would congregate in our guest bedroom in the old white house we used to lived in and talk about boys/boyfriends, their clothes, hair, and I can't remember what all. It was a very exciting time for me as I knew nothing about all this, but I could hardly wait to learn about it.

Peggy, Virginia, Judy, Mama, and I would gather around our piano and sing while Peggy or Virginia played the piano. And at our family Christmas gatherings, we always sang Christmas and popular tunes from sheet music they played. We liked to sing in the car when going from place to place. Sweet memories of those times.
