I've been thinking about Aunt Wilma a lot, these last few days. Mostly thinking about our last conversation, on her birthday. It went as many of our conversations over the years did; we always talked about when she lived at home, how she rode a horse all over, how she would herd the cattle across the river to graze them on the island, just hang out there all day and then bring them back across towards the evening. Our conversations always got around to how much we both loved her daddy and mine! Oh, what a reunion!!
